

Rarely Do You Meet a Man

Who does not desire to be well dressed. The man who is careful in the selection of his dress is in nearly every instance a careful man in other matters—the man who does things. The art of proper dressing is in the knowing how to secure the things which gives the wearer an appearance of neatness and attraction, be it of the cheaper or costlier quality. That's where the man who dresses from the John White Store has the advantage—the suits and furnishings we sell are selected properly and sold the same way.

It's The Little Things That Count

And this is certainly true in the little matters of dress. The good appearance of a well-fitting and well-chosen suit can be well-nigh ruined by a hurried or careless selection of some of the smaller things which make the well dressed man. The shirt, the collar, the tie, the cuffs—all should be right, and they will be right, all right, if you get them here. The price is right too.

RUMOR THAT BIG STEAMER HAD FOUNDERED

Carolina, Which Cleared on July 24, Said to Have Been Lost in the Gulf.

Persistent rumors were in circulation all of yesterday that the Austrian steamer Carolina, Captain Bartulich, which cleared from this port on July 24 for Spezia, Marseilles and Venice, had either foundered at sea or was ashore on one of the Florida keys, but the most careful inquiry failed to locate the source of the rumors or to disclose any grounds therefor.

The Carolina is a new vessel, having made only three or four voyages, and when she cleared from this port carried a cargo of 1651 tons of phosphate rock, 80 cases of cedar slats and 100 barrels of tallow.

That the rumor did not originate in this city is evidenced from the fact that a number of telegrams were received yesterday afternoon and last night from different cities stating that a steamship had foundered off Pensacola and that 17 lives were lost and asking for details. All were answered to the effect that the rumors were also in circulation here, but could not be confirmed.

GLIMPSES OF STANFORD WHITE

Remarkably Active Life Lived by Harry Thaw's Victim.

EARLY RISER AND HARD WORKER

Famous Architect's Activities Were So Varied That He Needed Forty-eight Hours to the Day—His Whole Life Dominated by Art—Lavish Entertainer, Whose Chief Recreation Was the Theater.

Stanford White, the noted architect recently shot and killed in New York by Harry Kendall Thaw of Pittsburgh, needed forty-eight hours to the day, so varied were his activities and so energetic and enthusiastic his personality, says the New York Herald. Those who saw him about the theaters in the evenings and in the restaurants of Broadway late at night would scarcely have realized it unless they had known him well—that ten or twelve hours of his day had been filled with the hardest kind of professional work. It was no unusual thing with him when he was interested in some great project and pushed for time to work all the way around the clock twenty-four hours at a stretch.

His whole life was dominated by the art idea, and his own home, his office and the studio high in the Madison Square Garden tower had that same touch of individuality. The apartments in the tower were decorated by him in accordance with his own unconventional ideas. Here it was his custom to give suppers after the theater to his friends, and in his circle of friendship were all kinds and conditions. Some nights he entertained

THE SALVATION ARMY OUTING TO-DAY

Arrangements Completed to Give the Poor Children of the City a Day of Pleasure.

Arrangements are completed for the outing to be given today for the poor children of Pensacola and at 9 o'clock the steamer Columbia will leave Palafox wharf loaded with children, some accompanied by their parents, and quantities of the good things that go to make occasions of this nature a success. It is expected that over 100 children will be on board when the steamer casts off her lines and makes the start for the Live Saving Station and pavilion where the day will be enjoyed.

Over a hundred pounds of fish were sent to the pavilion yesterday and Manager Burton will provide a fish chowder for the entire party. Everything at the pavilion will be free to the children and those who accompany them on the excursion.

Among the party will be the children from the Pearl Egan Home as well as those whom Capt. Norris has sought out from the poor homes of the city. The party will return to the city by 6 o'clock p. m.

there men and women of society, on other occasions he was host to a company of artists and authors, and frequently there were suppers attended by the reigning theatrical favorites.

Fifteen or twenty of the sprightliest beauties of the stage were sometimes invited there to supper in the ornately furnished room in the top of the Girard tower. Connected with it was a kitchen, where on short notice a supper for a hundred persons could be prepared, so lavish was the hospitality there dispensed. The tower itself gave no sign of the gaiety which so often filled its upper rooms.

One of the remarkable gifts of Mr. White was his ability to arrange the most artistic effects from things which to others would have been only a confused jumble. His studio represented a great outlay, for in its decorations were costly tapestries, bronzes and paintings. The prevailing color scheme was red as far as the walls were concerned, and the skillful arrangement of rugs and tiger skins and crystal globes produced a striking effect. Pendant from the ceiling was a globe of crystal and cut glass, two feet in diameter, from which a mellow radiance was suffused over the richly decorated apartment, which suggested a mysterious fairyland.

It was Mr. White's idea years ago to retire to the country after he had gained a competence, and for that purpose he acquired his estate in St. James, N. Y. The life of the city attracted him even in summer, however, and at all seasons of the year he found New York interesting, for it fitted his varying moods.

Mr. White was an early riser, and no matter how late he had been out the night before he usually was up at 6 or 7 o'clock in the morning. He went to his office at 9 o'clock and worked as hard as any of his subordinates. He usually remained until late in the afternoon, and then started to visit some of his clubs at 5 or 6 o'clock in the evening. His chief recreation was the theater, and often he visited three and four playhouses in the evening. He belonged to the corps of "first nighters," yet when he looked at a portion of a play he would drop into the theater where it was produced two or three times a week.

Mr. White was not fond of reading. He preferred to go and see things and talk, for in that way he gained ideas at first hand. He was a creator in his work and never content to take anything from books.

One of his friends remarked recently that he had spoken on several occasions of the automobile as being more useful to him than any invention of which he had ever availed himself. It gave him an opportunity of going quickly from place to place, for his mind was always active. He would hurry to some country house the building of which he was superintending, then return to the city and look over structures in which the firm was interested. His automobile would take him to three or four clubs, and then he would return home for dinner or go to one of the fashionable restaurants, where he was well known.

He went from place to place, however, more with the idea of seeing life than anything else.

Those who had his friendship and confidence speak of his death as an irreparable loss to architecture, for he had many plans for the artistic improvement of the American art of building which he hoped to see carried out in the next ten years.

Wolf With $100 Price on His Head.
Callaway county farmers have offered $100 reward for a large gray wolf that killed many sheep during the past winter, says a Mexico correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Many attempts have been made to catch the animal, and the amount of damage due to his depredations is estimated to be more than $1,000.

Lagering

Lagering or ageing (storing for maturity) has much to do with the quality and healthfulness of beer. With our exceeding that of any two other breweries in the world, we are enabled to lager our beer from four to five months before being marketed. This lagering brings out, to the utmost, that exquisite taste and fine flavor characteristic only of Anheuser-Busch Beer.

BARRANCAS WON SUNDAY GAME

An interesting game of baseball was played Sunday on the diamond at Ft. Barrancas between the Orioles of this city and a team representing the Fifteenth Company, Coast Artillery, which resulted in the score of 4 to 2 in favor of the soldier boys. It is possible that the two teams will arrange a contest at Palmetto Beach on Friday and if so lovers of the national game may be assured of a good game.

The Trade Winds.

Allusion is often made in books and in newspapers to the trade winds, but comparatively few young people know exactly what those winds are. They are produced by the rush of cold air from the poles to take the place of the column of heated air that ascends from the equator. The daily rotation of the earth toward the east makes the air from the north a northeast wind and the air from the south a southeast wind, and these winds nearly always blow in the same direction on the Atlantic and the Pacific ocean, where there is nothing in their way to obstruct or divert them. For this reason they are relied upon and made use of by sailors. Many persons suppose that their name, "trade winds," comes from their value to commerce, but it is more likely that the allusion is to their trading or "treading" in one direction.

How Long Before He Catches Up?

Johnny—When I was two years old and big brother six, was he three times as old as I?

Schoolmaster—Yes.
Johnny—And when I was four and he was eight, was he twice as old as I?

Schoolmaster—Certainly.
Johnny—And now I'm eight and he's twelve, is he only once and a half as old again as I am?

Schoolmaster—Yes. Why?
Johnny—Well, how long will it take me to catch up to him?—Chums.
